Gentlemen:

Are you people interested in buying some very old coins. My Father got these when he traveled extensively thru the old world. He once said he had some with Caesars head on them. The designs appear to be King Tutt looking figures. Have quite a pile of these.

Some were in a tiny paper that said in Father's writing from Ruins of Carthage over 1800 years old.

Also we have some old English coins etc. What price do you pay for such as the above.

Resp,

Mrs W. H. Parker

Dear Madam:

In reply to your communication of December 15th, we cannot say whether or not we are interested in ~~the~~ coins your father collected. Could you not send these to us for examination or supply us with a more detailed description?

Very truly yours,

Curator

Dear Madam:

Your package of coins received.

We very much doubt if we should care for any, or many, of the pieces, but will advise you in a few days.

Very truly yours,

Curator

Dear Madam:

I returned your coins the other day by Parcel Post and trust that you have received them. I regret to advise that there was nothing of value among them and would say that all together they would not be worth more than $3.00. We desire none of them and I am sorry I can tell you of no one ^{who} would be likely to care for them.

Very truly yours,

Curator

Gentlemen:

Referring your letter of Jan 30th. Did you not keep three of the coins which were wrapped in the pink cloth. There were four there when sent and only one returned. These three are not in the big lot either.

With the coins returned are three sheets of paper marked 90 140 and 120 I wonder if these were the prices on the three you kept.

Would you also be so kind as to tell me something you learned in looking over my Fathers coins. Arn't they BC coins like Father thought. What country do those belong to that have King Tutt markings on them etc. Thanking you so much.

Resp,

Mrs W. H. Parker

Dear Madam:

Replying to your favour of February 7th, when we unwrapped the coins in the pink cloth, they fell out and landed among other coins of a similar character, and we were unable to tell just which yours were. For all we know, all of these coins could have been found at Carthage as at that period it was part of the Roman Empire.

Since you wrote us, you will have received our letter stating what we thought the coins were worth.

Very few of the coins are before the Christian Era. A number of the small corroded coins in the package were issued from 200 - 400 A.D.

We do not know what you mean by the "King Tut" markings. Were they the coins with double triangles, making a six-pointed star? If so, those coins come from Morocco.

Very truly yours,

Curator
